NEWS AND RESOURCES

PUSHING TRADITIONAL WORKPLACE GENDER BOUNDARIES

Has COVID help shift behaviours and attitudes away from traditional gender roles, towards a more equitable workplace? Potentially - but there's still some way to go. This article, by Future Leaders Committee members Isabelle Franklin and Emma Layton, looks at three areas that will further improve gender equality at work. More >>>

APSC LAUNCHES APS WORKFORCE STRATEGY 2025

Australian Public Service Commissioner, Peter Woolcott AO, has launched Delivering for Tomorrow, a one-APS strategy to manage a high performing workforce that effectively and efficiently delivers for Government, Parliament and the Australian public. More >>>

OUR PURSUIT OF GOOD WORK

Why do we work? What does work deliver to whole-of-society? What will define the essence of work going forward? This blog by Sean Innes from the Public Policy and Societal Impact Hub at the ANU, considers these questions and more, to draw conclusions on what the future of work might look like. More >>>

IMPROVING DATA ON GENDER DIVERSITY

The ABS recently released a revised set of guidelines on the collection and dissemination of data on sex, gender and sexual orientation. These new standards, which anyone can use for their statistical collections, also encourages the use of gender-inclusive language when writing questions, such as "they" or "their" rather than "he/his" or "his/her".
